

Hedgerows

Hedgerows and lines of trees act as wildlife corridors for bats and other wildlife, connecting roosts with feeding grounds.

What to look out for?

Larger hedges are preferred as they provide more shelter, both from the weather and from predators, while hedges planted with native species such as hawthorn and blackthorn can be particularly useful as they attract a range of insects.