

Stream

Rivers, streams and canals provide lots of insect prey for bats as well as being useful features for them to find their way to their favourite hunting grounds.

What to look out for?

Stand on a bridge alongside a canal, river or a small waterway and see if you can see some bats flying over the water. If they stay flying low just above the water surface they are likely to be Daubenton's.

